Virginia State Capitol Building Rules

The Virginia Capitol, one of the most historic structures in the Western Hemisphere, every year welcomes thousands of Virginia citizens and visitors from around the country and throughout the world. Designed by Thomas Jefferson, the Virginia Capitol is the first public building in the New World designed as a monumental classical temple. A structure of unique historical interest, and the home to many irreplaceable works of art, the Virginia Capitol appears on the National Register of Historic Places and is one of only 14 sites on the 2008 United States World Heritage Tentative List, making it a candidate to become a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

The Virginia Capitol is unique among historic sites because it also is a working government building. The Virginia General Assembly, America's oldest English-speaking representative assembly, has been meeting at the Capitol in Richmond since 1788. It is important to respect and safeguard the historic nature of the Capitol as well as preserve the public's access to their government without impeding the day-to-day operations of state government and the conduct of the people's business.

In accordance with local, state, and federal laws, rules, and regulations, the following interim rules have been established jointly by the Clerk of the House and the Clerk of the Senate at the direction of the General Assembly's Committee on Joint Rules:

- The Virginia Capitol is open to the public during regular operating hours, as defined by the General Assembly. No person shall enter or remain in the State Capitol building other than during normal operating hours, unless properly authorized to do so.
- Possession or use of any device that may disrupt the conduct of business is prohibited, including but not limited to: voice-amplification equipment; bullhorns; blow horns; sirens, or other noise-producing devices; as well as signs on sticks, poles or stakes; or helium-filled balloons.
- No item may be affixed to monuments, railings, historic fixtures or surfaces. Use of stickers, labels, tape, screws, nails, balloons, sticks, poles or any other display technique for any purpose, may only occur with prior written authorization to do so from the Clerks of the House and Senate, in specifically identified locations.

These rules will be enforced fairly and impartially not only to ensure the participation and enjoyment of citizens and visitors to the Virginia Capitol but also guarantee that the legislative and executive branch officials working herein for the public and entire Commonwealth are able to perform their duties and responsibilities.

All violators are subject to removal.
